

Do you think people today are happier than the last generation?

No. In my view, we're actually less happy than our parents and grandparents. Of course, we can't generalize about it, but most people suffer from the stresses of everyday life, especially from work. Although we spend much of our life chasing happiness, we always think of it as getting external things, like having more money, having a big house, getting a promotion and so on. In our pursuit of these things, we just feel really stressed. So, I think consequently, we don't feel as happy as we imagine we could be.

Generalize about 概括

Suffer from the stresses of everyday life 被每天的压力所困扰

Chase happiness 追逐快乐

Get external things 得到外部东西

Get a promotion 得到晋升

In our pursuit of sth 在追求...的过程中

Stressed 压力大的

Then, in your opinion, what can people do in order to be happy?

Um, I believe one key to happiness is having enduring and intimate relationships. For instance, whether you get along with your colleagues, whether you have close ties with your siblings and whether you have a life-long partner who really loves you could all determine your level of happiness. So, I think it's essential that we think about how to deepen our relationships with those around us. For example, perhaps we can try throwing a party once in a while and inviting all of our friends over, and maybe it's a good idea to go on a short trip with colleagues or relatives occasionally.

One key to happiness 得到快乐的一个关键

Enduring and intimate relationship 长久且亲密的关系

Have close ties with your siblings 和兄弟姐妹们关系很紧密
