Describe a family member you would like to work with

You should say

Who this person is

What kind of person he or she is

Whether you've worked together before

And explain why you would like to work with him or her.

Well, I really want to work with my mom.

She is in her 50s but she is still pretty energetic every single day. I guess it's primarily because she has a positive outlook on life. For instance, I remember her telling me when I was a child that even though sometimes, we would run into problems, they were great lessons for us to learn. Plus, she is a people person and gets along with everyone she knows. Oh, yeah, she also likes to tell jokes. Well perhaps that's what makes her so popular among friends.

I haven't worked with my mom before, but I guess it would be fantastic to work with her after I graduate because for starters, what she does is what I'm interested in as well. She's an engineer and that's what I'm aiming to be in the future. Also, she's not the kind of person that always nags their children. Well, my dad is, so I doubt I would ever want to be at the same company as he is. I guess that's it. Hopefully, I'll be able to get a job at my mom's company in the future.

Describe a person you know who is good at cooking

You should say

What your relationship is with this person

What kind of food he or she cooks

And explain why you think this person is so good at cooking.

Alex is a really close friend of mine and he's a great cook.

You know, we go way back. It was five years ago that we first met. I joined the cooking club at my university and we met each other there. We really hit it off and ever since then, we've been really good friends and we often hang out together. What I love the most is going over to his apartment and taste some of the food he cooks.

As for what kind of food he cooks ...well, it's mainly western food. He has a few books on Italian cuisine, so he excels at cooking things like spaghetti, lasagna, risotto, etc etc. Oh, by the way, he's been trying out some new dishes lately. Last week I went to his place and he was experimenting with something new. I have no idea what it's called but it was so tasty. It was rich in flavor and the aftertaste was amazing.

Um, I suppose Alex is really good at cooking mainly because he has the genes. His dad runs a restaurant and Alex has been cooking since he was a child. Another reason is that he's quite eager to learn. He always reads culinary books and keeps trying out new things. I really like him about it cause I can always drop by and eat something special.

Describe a famous foreign person who you would like to meet

You should say

Who this person is

How you got to know this person

Why he or she is famous

And explain why you would like to meet him or her

Well, I would really like to meet my all-time favorite actor, David Schwimmer. I'm not sure whether you're familiar with his name, but you've definitely heard of the most famous role he's played---Ross Geller in the sitcom, Friends.

I got to know David through the show Friends. One of my friends recommended the show to me cause she said it was the funniest she had ever watched. I checked it out at once. I found Ross so ...adorable. You know, he plays a hopeless-romantic paleontologist and he just keeps getting married and then getting a divorce. Anyway, his dumbness makes him so lovable in the show.

As for why he is famous ...well, I guess practically everyone knows him because of Friends. I know he has also starred in a bunch of other sitcoms and movies, but he gained worldwide recognition for playing Ross Geller.

Um, I really wanna meet him simply because he's my favorite actor and I've been a big fan of his for a long time. I don't think anyone could ever replace him as my favorite. Also, you know, perhaps it would be great if I could learn a bit of acting from him if I were to meet David.

You never know when that skill would come in handy.

Describe a time when you were friendly to someone you didn't like

You should say

When and where it happened

Why you didn't like this person

And explain why you were friendly to him or her

Well, um it was in high school, actually to be precise, it was the last year of high school and everyone had to study really hard to prepare for the college entrance examination. At that time, apart from having all my attention on my study, I also had to put up with my deskmate.

His English name is Peter and I didn't quite like him cause he was kind of a smarty-pants. You know, of course, he always did better than me in exams, but he didn't have to show off in front of me, right? The thing is, what he kept saying was something like, "You didn't even solve that math problem? That's unbelievable! It's a piece of cake!" and also "Oh no, did you speak English? No one could understand you!" So, I'm sure you wouldn't like this kind of person either.

Although to me, he was always a pain in the neck, I tried my best to be friendly to him. It was mainly because I was brought up by my granddad and he often said no matter how others treated me, I had to be nice to them. By doing so, they would gradually stop being annoying. Or, to put it another way, they would go and bug others. Plus, sometimes, I felt like in a way, what he said helped to motivate me to work harder. If I got better scores, he would just shut his mouth.

So anyway, I guess that's pretty much it.

Describe an old person you know who you respect

The person I really respect is my grandfather. He's in his early 70s, but he doesn't seem old at all. I think it's primarily because he is extremely energetic every single day. You know, he goes for a run every morning in the park, and sometimes he goes fishing with his old pals. Plus, my granddad is a really hilarious guy and he tells many jokes. Whenever I hang out with him, he always cracks me up.

My grandfather is my role model and I really look up to him cause for starters, he is a glass half full kind of guy. He is always positive and it seems like nothing bothers him. Just to give you an example, a couple of weeks ago, he asked me to go fishing with him and I agreed. But just as we were about to set out, it began to rain. I was really bummed out. But my granddad said, "It's okay, let's play chess instead". Then, we began to look for our chess board and it was nowhere to be found. Even after this, he was still smiling. At the same time, he was scratching his head, saying, "I must have left it in the park". Um another reason I really respect him is because he admits he's wrong whenever he's made a mistake. You know, it's not easy for elderly people. Most of them think saying "I'm wrong" makes them lose face. But my granddad is not one of them ...

Describe a friend who you think is a good leader

You should say

Who this friend is

How you first met

How other people behave towards him or her

And explain why you think this person is a good leader

Well, I think my dad is a good leader. You know, my dad and I are pretty close and we hang out a lot, so I guess I could say we're very good friends. My dad runs a small company. They specialize in selling children's clothes.

How other people behave towards him ...well, actually, my dad is just like any other person at the company and other people don't treat him any differently. I think it's because he's a kind of person that likes to keep a low profile and doesn't want those working at the company to think of him as someone that they can't get along with. You know, once, I went with my dad to his office and on the way there, he met a couple of people who worked for him. To my surprise, they didn't say anything like 'Manager Yang' or something like that. Instead, they all said 'Lao Yang', which is something we say to very close friends.

In my opinion, there are a couple of reasons why he's a good leader. First of all, he's nice to everyone and treats people equally. Plus, he works extremely hard himself, so he sets a good example to others. Another reason could be that he throws a party at the company once in a while so that everyone can have fun and wind down after some busy days. So, yeah, I guess these are the reasons why my dad is a great leader.

To be honest with you, I even had a crush on her before, but later I found out she had a boyfriend. She still does.

She is quite slender. I think it's because she works out at the gym on a regular basis. She also told me that she liked to go for a run in the park once in a while. She has big eyes, sparkling eyes. I remember the first time I saw her, I just couldn't help but think 'wow, this girl is the most beautiful girl I've ever seen'.

What she is like ...well, she's nice and quite approachable. You know, basically, she gets along with anyone she knows. Also, she can be quite funny sometimes. Last weeks, we hung out at a coffeehouse. She told me a joke that made me laugh my head off.

To be honest with you, I still like her. But there's nothing I can do cause she is in a very stable relationship. I guess I'll just be her friend, a very close friend.

Describe a popular band or singer in your country

You should say

And explain why you think they're popular

Well, 王力宏 is one of the most famous singers in China.

I guess, if my memory serves me right, he first rose to fame about 15 years ago. At that time, he had just come to Taiwan from America. Oh, by the way, he's an ABC and when he first came back to China, he barely spoke a word of Chinese. As far as I remember, the song that made him a household name was 公转自转. Sorry, I really can't translate this into English.

As for what kind of music he performs ...well, it's mainly R&B, you know, rhythm and blues and apart from that, there are some Chinese elements in his songs too, which I'm really into. It's not uncommon that he plays some traditional Chinese instruments in his music, such as Erhu, Guzheng, so on and so forth. Oh, I should also mention that he sang some Peking Opera in one of his songs several years back.

I believe 王力宏 enjoys so much popularity in China not only because he sings really well, he sets a good example to every man. You know, as a pop star, he has never really had any affairs over the years. This is unbelievable if you consider what this industry is like. He loves his wife so much that makes every girl envy her. Oh, yeah, another reason is I guess, he speaks English so well. I mean, his accent is quite attractive to a lot of people. So, yeah, these are why he's such a big name in China.

Um, earlier this year, I went to Japan with my girlfriend. Actually, to be precise, we went to Hokkaido and we were there from the 1st to the 6th of January. You know, my girlfriend had always been a big fan of Japanese culture and she could even speak Japanese fluently, so she had been longing to go to Japan for ages. We chose to go to Hokkaido because it was in winter, and everything there was covered in a layer of white which was so beautiful.

As for what we did there ...well, um, we did a few things. For starters, we would stay at a different hotel each night and all of them had hot springs. Actually, that was a major part of the trip. We would go and totally relax in the hot springs each night. Plus, on the fifth day of our trip, we went to Sapporo. We did a lot of shopping, especially for cosmetics.

Um, you know, I would like to go there again primarily because of the views. They really took my breath away on my first day there. You could see snow everywhere and it seemed like the whole world was covered in white. Another reason is my parents haven't been abroad before, so I think Hokkaido could be the first foreign place they go to. Of course, I shouldn't forget to mention the hot springs. Describe an unusual building you've visited

Where it is

What it looks like

And explain why you think it's unusual.

Well, there's a building called Tianzi Hotel. I think it's extremely weird-looking. You know, Tianzi in Chinese means the son of God, but in fact, this building is made up of three Gods. I know it sounds pretty confusing. I will talk about it in a while. Anyway, it's located in Sanhe city, Hebei province. So it's pretty close to Beijing actually, only 2 hours' drive away.

As I was saying, it's a hotel, so obviously it's used for accommodation. But truth be told, I doubt anyone would want to stay there simply because it's so weird-looking.

If I'm not mistaken, this hotel has won multiple awards for being the world's ugliest building. When you approach it, you would never think it's a hotel cause there are three Chinese mythical gods standing in front you. They're all dressed in traditional Chinese clothing. To make it even weirder, the god on the left seems to be smiling at you all the time. So, I guess it really gives people goosebumps, or at least, I got them when I was there.

Well, in terms of why I think it's unusual ...um, I think it's self-explanatory, right? Who would ever design a hotel like that? And also, who would ever wanna live inside the bodies of three gods. I know this hotel has drawn a great deal of attention since it was built, but I don't think anyone could really appreciate the unusual aesthetic of it.

Three years ago I went on a trip to Tibet with my folks and we stayed there for a week. Among all the places we went to, my favorite was Yamdrok Lake. It's a freshwater lake and it's one of the three largest sacred lakes in Tibet. I was quite stunned by the spectacular views. I mean, when I saw the lake, it really took my breath away. It was so immense and the water was crystal-clear.

Um, apart from taking hundreds of photos, we also had a picnic by the lake. We were quite lucky cause there were not a lot of people doing the same and we just felt really good about it.

Well, there are tons of colors there. For instance, the lake is blue which is really gorgeous. And there are many snow-capped mountains around, so definitely they're white. More importantly, you get to see a lot of prayer flags. I'm not sure if you know what they are, but if you go to Tibet, you can see them everywhere. They're made up of five colors---red, yellow, green and ...um, what else ...white and blue probably. I'm sure each of them represents something like good harvest, many children and so on. But I'm sorry, I'm not really an expert on that ...

Anyway, it was a really beautiful place and visiting it was like a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

Describe a historical city you've been to

Well, I went to Yinchuan with my folks two years ago. It's located in the northwest of China quite close to Inner Mongolia and Qinghai Province. Yinchuan used to be the capital city of the Western Xia about 1000 years ago. It was established by a minority group called Dangxiang. In the meantime, there was also a much stronger country on its east, the Song.

Well, we went there because my dad is really partial to the desert and that was exactly why we went on this trip. You can see some spectacular desert views if you drive further north from Yinchuan.

Anyway, apart from visiting the desert, we went to a few places of interest. One was the tomb area of the kings of Western Xia. I still remember that day when we saw those tombs, I was kind of shocked because they're so gigantic and look a bit like the pyramids in Egypt. But these tombs have a more roundish style. Besides, we went to a place where there were two pagodas. I'm really sorry, it's been a couple of years already, I can't remember the name of those pagodas now, but they're definitely of great historical importance.

Although we went there mainly to see the desert, I found the history part of the city quite fascinating too. It's not something Chinese students learn a lot in textbooks, but it's definitely worth reading about.

Well, last month, I invited Andy to have a meal with me in a really upscale restaurant. Andy and I go way back. We've been friends since middle school. The restaurant we went to is a really fancy one dedicated to Japanese food, or more specially, it was a revolving sushi restaurant.

There are a couple of reasons why I treated him to this meal. First of all, we hadn't seen each other in a while cause it was winter vacation before then. We did a lot of catching up and he shared with me quite a lot of interesting things that had happened during his holiday. Plus, I had something really important ask him about. I was having a crush on a girl at the moment and her birthday was around the corner. I asked Andy whether he had any advice on how I could impress her on her birthday. However, what Andy said was beyond my wildest imagination. He told me this girl was not my type ... He said she was a material girl and I shouldn't date her. Long story short, I listened to Andy eventually and didn't make any move.

So, that was our meal. I didn't get what I wanted, but what Andy said was true. Actually, if I were dating her, I would be broke. I think next time, when there's another girl I like, I will treat Andy to dinner or something again.

A couple of years ago, I dated a girl. At that time, I was head-over-heels in love with her. To me, she was like an angel. You know, she was gorgeous and smart and considerate. We were together for half a year.

But, um, one thing she didn't tell me was that she was actually two years older than me. I'm not saying it's a problem. I don't think a girl shouldn't date anyone younger than her. I just think it's better that we tell each other everything.

I guess the reason she didn't tell me that was because she had thought I wouldn't be so into her if I had known her actual age. You know, in China, I suppose some people find it a little weird if your girlfriend or wife is older than you. If she is, she's likely to be more mature and many men will feel uncomfortable being the less mature one in a relationship.

How I felt after I found out the truth ...well, I didn't think it was a big deal. We talked about it and everything was okay after that. We eventually broke up because of something else, not really the age thing.

Now, once in a while, I still think about her and the days when we were together. We were extremely in love and we even thought about our life after getting married. It's a pity it didn't work out.

Um, well, it was actually two months ago. One of my best friends, Alex, was throwing a birthday party in a different part of town, to be precise, it was in the northwest. A couple of my other friends and I live in the southeast. It was really far away, so we decided to drive there.

I was with three other friends. All of us are really close to Alex, the birthday person. One of us is a well-experienced driver, so that day, he was responsible for taking us there. Oh, by the way, his English name is Arthur.

When we were halfway there, there was a really heavy traffic jam and you know, the cars were kind of packed like sardines, so Arthur suggested that we make a detour and it would be even faster. However, after about 15 minutes or so, we somehow made a wrong turn and ended up in the middle of nowhere. Everyone was extremely confused and we felt pretty bad cause we were running late for the party.

Then, Arthur, the experienced driver, and also the one who was responsible for us getting lost, said, 'Let's just drive in the direction of our destination and eventually we will find our way back.' luckily, it worked, but we ended up being 20 minutes late.

Um, well, what I'm gonna talk about is totally ridiculous. It was making a list of the ugliest people I knew.

I was 15 or 16 years old at that time and one day, I was at home, feeling really bored. In fact, I had a ton of homework to do, but I just kept procrastinating. Then, a really ridiculous question crossed my mind, "Who are the ugliest people I know?" You know, after I asked myself that, I thought it would be a great idea to make a list. So, I just did it.

Um, how I did it ...you know, now, whenever I think of that, I just can't help but laugh out loud. I came up with a bunch of criteria for whether someone was ugly or not. But, I'm sorry I really can't remember all the details anymore. But anyway, after about one and a half hours, I finished that list. I was at the top of it.

I believe you'd agree I totally wasted that 90 minutes. I just did it in order to kill time, but actually, there was something more important for me to do. I ended up hitting the sack pretty late because I still had to do my homework.

Well, speaking of this, now that I think about it, perhaps this could be a drinking game. You know, whatever game we play, whoever loses has to call someone and tell that person he or she is really hideous. Oh, my god, I'm so evil...

Well, I've been trying to find a girlfriend for a long time, but it seems like I'm nowhere near achieving that goal.

I think I first had this ambition five years ago when I was still in high school. At that time, a few of my classmates already had a boyfriend or girlfriend and they would go on double dates or triple dates together, so I was kind of left out. I guess this was when I started to really wanna have a girlfriend. I remember vividly I was having a major crush on my best pal's girlfriend. I know it's embarrassing to say but I was head-over-heels in love with her. However, I didn't have the guts to tell her that.

You know, I'm still single now. Honestly I have no idea why. I mean, I'm quite smart and I look pretty good as well. Plus, I play soccer. I've always believed that boys who play sports are quite attractive. Sadly, it doesn't apply to me.

Um, I suppose I have to try harder. You know, I'm thinking of joining some clubs at my university, like the magic club. Perhaps if I were able to do some magic tricks, I would look more charming. Haha, who knows.

Well, I can't really think of any good service I received, so I'm gonna talk about one that my girlfriend had. A travel agency in Japan, or more specifically, in Kyoto, organizes bridal ceremonies for single women and this is exactly what my girlfriend had although she is not single.

It was two months ago. She went to Kyoto with a couple of friends and they happened to be staying within spitting distance of the agency. They saw the ad of the service and out of curiosity, my girlfriend signed up for it. The agency offered this 'solo wedding' package which included choosing your own special gown and bouquet, hairstyle and limousine service. It cost her an arm and a leg, but she told me the experience was well worth it.

Anyway, as for who she had this service with ...well, as I said earlier, she was with several friends, but it was only her who had the service. All the others hesitated because of the high price and decided not to do it.

According to my girlfriend, she really enjoyed it because, first of all, it was a different style of wedding ceremony and she was really delighted to have tried it. Plus, when she was in the gorgeous gown she chose herself, it totally boosted her self-confidence and she felt she was the most beautiful girl in the world. Anyway, she was on top of the world that day and I think that's worth a million dollars.

Well, um, my 12th birthday was pretty memorable for me. I'm sure a lot of other candidates also talk about their birthdays, so you may think it's gonna be a little mundane and boring, but I'm sure mine is different.

My folks and I threw a rather small party at home. It was only three of us. Although we didn't invite many relatives or friends over, we still had a blast.

Um, anyway, what we did ...well, you know, this is the fun part. Apart from eating a cake and making a birthday wish, my parents and I did something that would be extremely important throughout our lives. You know, we each wrote a bucket list. I mean, we came up with a lot of things that we hoped to do before we die. Um, among all the things on my list, there is traveling the world, sky-diving, biking to Tibet, writing a book and so on. Oh, yeah, the most special thing is living in each continent for at least a year. I'm not sure whether you think it sounds unrealistic, but these are all the things I'm trying to achieve for the rest of my life. Although I was only 12 at that time, I believe everything I wrote was great and worth living for.

Well, I remember this event really well primarily because of this bucket list. Actually, during the past ten years, I've already ticked a few things off it, like learning to dance, saying 'I love you' to ten strangers on the street. In the years to come, I will work really hard to make everything on that list come true.

I'm going to talk about an interesting conversation that I had a couple of weeks ago in a music shop. I was walking along one of the main shopping streets in the city centre, when a large window displaying all sorts of musical instruments caught my eye. Out of curiosity, I decided to go in and have a look around.

The person I ended up speaking to was a shop assistant on the second floor, in the area of the shop dedicated to acoustic guitars. I hadn't intended to speak to anyone, but the assistant approached me in a friendly way and asked whether I had any questions.

I explained to the assistant that I hadn't played the guitar for years, but that I wondered what the differences were between the various acoustic guitars on show. He talked to me about the different makes and models, whether they were factory or hand made, the woods and varnishes used, the variation in sound quality, and of course the price range.

I found the conversation fascinating because the shop assistant was so knowledgeable. It was obvious that he had a passion for the guitar, and he didn't mind talking to me even though I had made it clear that I didn't intend to buy anything. He even picked up and played three or four of the instruments to demonstrate the differences in their sound.

Well, it was last year, to be precise, during the summer holiday. My best friend, Mark and I free on a Saturday, so we figured it might be great if we went on a picnic together in 北海 park. We were supposed to meet each other at the gate of the park at 9 in the morning. At about 8:50, I got a call from him.

He called to tell me that he was running a little late because of the bumper to bumper traffic. He said sorry and told me that it was driving him up the wall, but there was nothing he could do about it and he had been stuck in traffic and hadn't moved an inch for half an hour.

Regarding how I felt about it ...well, you know, the very moment I heard that he would be late, I got pretty mad at him cause he had always been a punctual person. But later, after he had explained everything, I just calmed down cause he felt pretty helpless too in that situation. Plus, he said he would make it up to me by treating me to dinner.

Well, anyway, he eventually got there at 9:40, but our picnic was still a blast.

I only made a gift by hand once. It was three years ago and I gave my boyfriend a paper lantern.

How I made it ...well, this must be extremely difficult to explain cause making it was totally not a walk in the park. You know, I bought things like bamboo sticks, paper, glue and um ... There were some other things, but I just can't remember very clearly anymore. I cut the paper, bent the bamboo sticks, glued them together and um ... Long story short, I made a lantern. It looked really hideous, but I gave it to my boyfriend anyway. To my delight, he loved it so much and I was on top of the world when he said so.

As for why I gave him this ...well, it was because of the Lantern Festival. You know, in China, the 15th day of a new year is when we hang lanterns outside. So I thought I might as well give him a lantern as a belated new year gift.

Now, once in a while, we still jokingly talk about this really ugly gift I gave him. I once asked my boyfriend whether he really loved it. He said he did not only because of the gift itself, but also because of all the effort I put into it.

If I had the money, I'd like to buy my own helicopter. I recently saw a TV programme about someone who flew around in his own helicopter, and I remember thinking that it would be great to have one. The helicopter on the programme was a small, blue, two-seater and it seemed quite easy to fly - that's the kind of thing I'd like to buy.

Ideally, I'd use my helicopter instead of a car. First, I'd need to learn to fly it, but then I'd use it to go on short trips or holidays. It would be fantastic to be able to avoid traffic jams, and get everywhere in a fraction of the time it normally takes. I'd take friends and family sightseeing, over cities or mountain tops, and maybe I could even use it to do the shopping!

The reason I'd like to buy a helicopter is that you can park one almost anywhere. You don't need to find a runway or an airport like you would for a plane. So I'd be able to park my helicopter in my garden - if I had a bigger garden. Also, I've always been intrigued by those helipads on the tops of tall buildings - I think it would be fun to land on top of a building. A helicopter probably isn't a realistic choice of vehicle, but you never know - I might win the lottery!

I want to talk about a car I wish to buy in the future, which is the Mercedes Benz GL-Class.

This is a luxurious sport utility vehicle, or SUV, with an optional third row seat to accommodate up to 7 people. The color I prefer is silver metallic, with leather seats and GPS navigation system. One of the features that really attracts me is its newly designed "panorama roof", which allows all passengers to enjoy views of the sky even when they are at the very back of the car.

My wife told me that if I bought this vehicle, we would have to drive it throughout the entire US... and I totally agree with her, because this SUV provides all the necessary safety and comfort features for such long trip. I would drive this car to all major cities such as San Francisco, Chicago, and New York, and to different coastal areas as well as national parks.

Actually, the main reason why I want to buy this car is that I saw its commercial the other day and my all-time favorite tennis player Roger Federer was in it. I think this car is as elegant as him and it definitely can elevate the image of a person. However, this car costs too much, around $90,000 US dollars... I can't afford this car at the moment so all I can do now is to keep working hard and save lots of money to make this dream come true!

I had a GI Joe before, or maybe I should say it's a GI Joe prototype. I think GI Joes are probably the most popular action figures in the world. Honestly, I'm proud that I had it as a child because as far as I know, it was not mass produced, so not many people had it. Well, um this GI Joe had brown hair and wore a green jacket. He looked pretty firm.

Um, it was not mass produced, so how did I get it? Well, when I was 7, my uncle came back from the United States with it and he gave it to me as a gift. I remember vividly he told me it was pretty rare cause it was not a regular GI Joe. Even to this day, I still have no idea how he got it.

How often I played with it ...well, you know, I was with it all the time. I took it to school, I took it on trips and I even went to bed with it cause you know, my uncle told me to treasure it.

Um, anyway, this GI Joe was really special to me primarily because it was not easy to get hold of. Actually, one of my American friends told me that such a GI Joe prototype was sold for 200 thousand dollars on Ebay a while back. Now I feel sad because I lost it on a trip when I was about 9. If I still had it, I guess a lot of people would pay an arm and a leg in order to own it.

I would like to buy a New Samsung phone in the near future. To be specific, it's called Galaxy S6. Actually, Samsung just unveiled this phone not long ago, so I guess I would look pretty cool to have it.

To be honest with you, I'm not quite sure when I would be able to buy it cause I'm a little short of money at the moment and this Galaxy S6 is even more expensive than an Iphone 6. So, I guess I would have to scrimp and save for a couple of months in order to buy it. Oh, by the way, I would definitely buy this phone from JD.COM cause that's where I buy everything. It's kind of like the Chinese equivalent of Amazon.

Um, I would really love to own a Samsung S6 primarily because it looks super sleek. The frame is aluminum and it comes in four colors - black, white, platinum gold and emerald green. I would probably choose emerald green cause that's my favorite color. Another reason why I wanna buy it is this phone makes it easier to multitask. For instance, you can watch a video while checking email or browsing the web simultaneously. Also, I've been an Iphone user for a long time and I really feel like a change. I guess this Galaxy S6 could be a good start of my Samsung using experience.

Actually, I've been reading a book called The Tipping Point lately and I still haven't finished it. It's written by my favorite writer Malcolm Gladwell.

The Tipping Point was recommended by an American friend of mine, Michael. He told me it was a page-turner and I should really give it a read.

As the name of the book suggests, this book is about how an idea or message reaches a tipping point and becomes extremely popular or memorable. For instance, there used to be a cigarette infomercial in the US that contained a minor grammatical mistake in its tag line. Sorry, I can't remember what it was, but it effectively made its ad quite unforgettable and so the tobacco company made a huge profit from it. In addition to this, there are tons of other examples in the book to tell readers how to market a product better, how to teach students better and even how to make a TV show appeal to more viewers.

So, yeah, this is what I learned from the book. I haven't actually applied anything from the book to my work, but I guess perhaps in the future, when I deliver a presentation or something, I will be able to make my point better. Hopefully.

Three years ago, I watched a thought-provoking movie called Up in the Air. I was still in college and one day I skipped my afternoon lessons. But I felt quite bored in my dorm, so I decided to watch a movie. I read reviews of a couple of movies and Up in the Air was the one that I ended up watching.

It stars George Clooney, the most charming actor in Hollywood I guess. In this movie, he is a guy who never wants to have a family, never wants to settle down. He doesn't even have a home. To him, whenever he's flying somewhere, he feels like at home. Well, long story short, he then meets someone he really loves and finally decides to have a family. However, it turns out that lady is already married. At the end of the movie, George Clooney is back in the air and he finds out he's achieved his life-long goal - flying 10 million miles. Surprisingly, he's not thrilled about it at all. So yeah, that's the plot.

Um, I would like to watch it again primarily because I want my girlfriend to watch it with me. You know, I think the point this movie is trying to make is that our family is the most important in our life and no matter how hard you deny it, you will never be truly happy without them. By watching this movie with my girlfriend, I believe it will bring us closer together. We will treasure our relationship more and we will be more in love.

I'd like to talk about a team project that I was involved in during my final term at business school. There were four of us on the team, and our task was to work with a local company to research a new market, in a European country, for one of their products or services. Our objective was to produce a report and give a presentation.

The first thing we did was split into two groups of two. We had been assigned a company that produced a range of bicycle accessories, so two of us spent some time getting to know the company while the other two researched the market and the competitors in the target country, which was Germany. In the end, I think it was a successful project because we managed to identify a possible gap in the market in Germany for one of the company's products. Our group presentation also went really well.

Until that point, the course had been all about business theory, so it was quite a learning experience to work with a real company. I felt a real sense of accomplishment when we handed in our report and delivered our presentation, and I think all of us were proud of what we had done.

Well, you know, when I was in middle school, I wasn't really fond of learning English. It was the subject I hated the most. I suppose it's mainly because our English teacher at that time was super boring. She was Miss Yang and she was referred to as the 'dull one'. What we did most of the time in her class was learn grammar and grammar and grammar. Oh, plus, we had no choice but to memorize 100 words on a daily basis cause if we didn't do it, we would have to copy all the words 20 times the next day. It's embarrassing to say but I was always among those who stayed behind after school to copy the words.

Now, things have changed so much. English is my favorite. I think it's all owing to American TV shows. You know, I'm a huge fan of a couple of American hit shows, like the Big Bang Theory, Two Broke Girls, and How I Met Your Mother. Oh, now that I think about it, they're all sitcoms. I suppose it's just because they're all funny and I get to crack up a lot while watching them. Of course, laughing is not all. Over the years, my English speaking and listening have improved dramatically thanks to watching these shows. It's no exaggeration to say that three years ago, I could barely speak a word of English. I guess now, you could say I speak it quite well, right?

Um, anyway, if my memory serves me correctly, it was about three months ago that I learned about this website. In order to kill time, I just googled 'interesting websites' and that's how I found it.

Like I mentioned just now, there are loads of awkward family photos on this site. For instance, in one photo, in a crowd of beautiful girls who are in their bikinis, there's a skinny man in a pair of pink briefs. It's because the man and his sisters went to the beach, but he forgot to bring his trunks. When I first saw it, I literally laughed my head off cause the man looked extremely shy and was kind of blushing. Oh, sorry, maybe you don't find it that funny due to my poor description, but trust me, check out this site yourself and you will not regret it.

Um, I think this website is extremely interesting primarily because you get to see others in awkward situations and you just can't help but laugh out loud. Some people might find it a waste of time browsing through the photos, but I think it's a great way to kill time and unwind a little.

Um, you know, when I was in high school, I learned Hip-hop dance on a website which is quite similar to Youtube. It's youku. In high school, I had no choice but to study on a daily basis and I felt like life was not fun at all. So I decided to learn Hip-hop dance and I believed it would be a great way for me to unwind.

How I learned it ...um, well, basically, every day after finishing my homework, I would learn some Hip-hop moves from Youtube. To be precise, the style I tried to master was Popping. You know, you move like a robot and that's Popping. I would look at a dancer doing a few moves and then I would click on pause and try to copy everything. So yeah, this is how I learned it.

Um I think it was extremely interesting to learn it then primarily because I was really happy dancing and sweating. Although I haven't performed for anyone, I feel on top of the world every time I dance. Now, I still dance a lot, but I only do it when I'm on my own. You know, I have an empty room in my apartment where there's a big mirror and I just practice there.

Perhaps, in the future, I will try to perform for others, but I don't think I can do it now. I guess what I have to do is practice more and maybe one day, when I think I'm ready, I will go out there and surprise everybody.

And explain why you can't learn it now

Well, I really want to learn to sing and I've been meaning to sign up for some lessons for ages, but I haven't found the time.

I guess if I really learn it, I would probably find a private tutor online and arrange some one-on-one lessons with him or her. I think 2 or 3 hours a week would be sufficient. Actually, if I met up with this tutor too often, I wouldn't be able to afford it cause it's usually quite pricey to have a private teacher.

There are a couple of reasons why I would like to learn to sing. For starters, I'm always mocked at by my friends cause whenever I sing karaoke, they would tell me I'm extremely tone-deaf. It's pretty embarrassing every time. Apart from that, I think I would definitely be able to surprise my girlfriend. You know, she is an incredible singer whereas I'm not. If I could sing, we would perform some kind of duet or something. I suppose the No.1 reason is still being able to show off in front of friends and colleagues.

Anyway, why I can't learn it now ...well, it's mainly because I have a lot on my plate and I can hardly find any time to be really devoted to it. I guess I'll wait and see.

Describe an important job in your country

You should say

What the job is

What job requires

And explain why the job is important.

Well, I've always thought of comedians as very important, not only in my country cause they make people laugh and laughter is the best medicine.

Without doubt, only those who have a strong sense of humor can be comedians. My all-time favorite comedian is Steven Chow, an actor from Hong Kong. He is regarded as the king of comedy in China. He never fails to crack me up although I've watched all his movies over and over again. I guess it's because he's so good at pulling all kinds of weird facial expressions and um ...oh, his voice is hilarious too.

So, like I said, to be a good comedian requires humor, funny facial expression and a voice that can be recognized easily.

Well, in terms of why this job is important ... I think it's primarily because comedians bring us happiness and this is what everybody wants. Plus, when I watch a comedy, it really helps me to unwind. You know, most modern people are always under a great deal of pressure and they try so hard to find a way to relax. Describe an exciting sport you know

Well, I think soccer is a very exciting sport. Actually I suppose it's the most popular and captivating sport there is.

I got to know this sport because of Manchester United. In 1999, they won a lot of trophies and that's when I began to be crazy about them. Over the years, they've experienced ups and downs but I've always been and will always be a hardcore fan of theirs.

Um, well, I don't think it's a difficult sport if you just wanna play it for fun, but honestly, if you aim to play it professionally, it's definitely not a walk in the park. It requires perseverance and years of practice. For instance, Cristiano Ronaldo is my all-time favorite and he works extremely hard on a daily basis. As far as I know, he does 1000 sit-ups every day and practices free kicks on his own every time after their regular training. Plus, you also need to think fast cause sometimes you have to make a decision as to what to do next in the blink of an eye and this is something that makes someone really stand out from the average players.

Well, you know, I find soccer really exciting primarily because it's really unpredictable. I mean, in many cases, although one side has been leading throughout the whole match, it's still possible that their opponents can equalize and kill the game with a last-minute goal. Apart from that, you always see tackles and injuries and even fights during a game. I'm not saying they're good, but they really give you an adrenaline rush...

Well, I'm gonna talk about a song that was really popular when I was a kid. But although everybody knew the song, I don't think it has a name. Or perhaps, I just don't know it.

I was probably 5 or 6 when I first heard it and I was at school. It was in a class called Society. I guess our teacher taught us this song in order to tell us that we shouldn't keep the money we found on the road.

The song goes like, 'I picked up a cent on the road and I gave it to a police officer. He complimented me and said I was a good kid.' Yeah, something like that.

I remember singing it basically every single day cause it's extremely catchy and as long as you hear it, you will be able to sing it immediately. But now, how I feel when I hear it ...um, I don't know. I don't think I will feel anything. To me, it's just one of many songs children sang and I only remember it well because of its catchy tune.
