

Do you think people should undergo tests before beginning a job?

Well, in my view, people all need to take tests to see whether they're physically and mentally healthy before beginning to work somewhere. This helps their employers to see if they are fit for the job. For example, if you wanna be a pilot, you need to be fit both physically and mentally. If you're not physically healthy, you wouldn't be able to fly a plane. Likewise, we can't imagine someone being a pilot if they have mental disorders.

Speaking of mental problems, why do so many people suffer from depression?

Well, I think quite a few factors contribute to depression. First of all, it's genes. By that I mean, some people are born to be introverted and they're always cooped up in their own world. Another reason might be people's upbringing. You know, perhaps they went through a really tough childhood because their parents treated them badly and there was no one they could turn to for help. This kind of experience might lead to them thinking that everyone is against them. I think this is a symptom of suffering from depression.
