

What kind of people do Chinese children want to be similar to when they grow up?

Well, I don't think we can generalize about it. Some children want to be movie stars or famous singers when they grow up, so they usually idolize those celebrities in the entertainment industry and try to copy everything they do. Also, I believe a lot of children only see their parents or grandparents as role models, so they try to be similar to them.

Do you think entertainment stars are good role models?

Well, that really depends. A large number of movie stars and singing stars work extremely hard and they don't have any bad habits. These people should be the ones children and teenagers look up to and they're a positive influence in our society. For instance, Jacky Chan is a really hard-working guy and he has gone through a lot of hardship to get to where he is now. He's definitely a good role model. However, some entertainment stars could be a negative influence on young people. For example, I've read that several actors have been imprisoned because they took drugs.
